PRESENTATION STAFF & FIELD SWORD

This is a High-Grade Presentation sword presented to Captain John F. Snyder. Captain Snyder served in three Pennsylvania infantry units: 110th, 192nd and the 214th Infantry. These enlistments were short ranging from 100 days to 1 year. Snyder was with the 110th for the Battle of Winchester, 23 March 1862; was called out in defense of the State with the 192nd; and served on Guard and Provost duty in the Shenandoah with the 214th.

The sword is a High-Grade Clauberg sword with a fancy German Silver hilt and ornate guard with 100% gold wash. The German Silver scabbard has ornate mounts and a silver presentation plaque between the ring mounts, which reads as follows:

Eighth Union League regiment

110th Pennsylvania Infantry Regiment

110th Infantry, First State Color. Composed of men from Blair, Huntingdon, Bedford, Philadelphia, Centre and Clearfield counties, the 110th was organized during the fall of 1861 and they received their flag on December 1, 1861. Due to a bitter rivalry between city-boys and country-boys, reinforced by the fact all but one of the officers were from Philadelphia, a riot broke out in January 1862 over who would be the color-bearer. More than 40 soldiers were killed or maimed. Many soldiers re-enlisted during the winter of 1863-64 and the flag may have been retired from service when taken to Harrisburg by the men on furlough.

110th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers

Early in the summer of 1861, J. Y. James, a citizen of Warren, received authority from the War Department to recruit a brigade, to consist of three regiments. Recruiting was commenced on the 23d of August, and on the 1st of September, a camp of rendezvous and instruction was organized near Huntingdon, in the central part of the State. About the 1st of December the troops occupying this camp, were transferred to Camp Curtin, the arrangement for a brigade was broken up, and independent regiments were organized from them. The companies of the One Hundred and Tenth were recruited in Philadelphia and the following counties:

- Company A - Blair County
- Company B - Huntingdon County
- Company C - Blair and Bedford Counties
- Company D - Huntingdon County
- Company E - Philadelphia
- Company F - Philadelphia
- Company G - Philadelphia
- Company H - Blair County
- Company I - Philadelphia
- Company K - Centre and Clearfield Counties

Organization of the regiment was completed by the selection of the following field officers:

- William D. Lewis, Jr., of Philadelphia, Colonel
- James Crowther, of Blair County, Lieutenant Colonel
- John C. Johnson, of Philadelphia, Major

Colonel Lewis had served in the militia, and had commanded the Eighteenth Regiment in the Three months' Service.

On the 2d of January, 1862, the regiment left Camp Curtin, and proceeded by rail to Hagerstown, whence it made a forced march to Hancock, the enemy, under Stonewall Jackson, at that time threatening the place. Arms were distributed immediately after its arrival, at midnight on the 4th, and it reported for duty to General F. W. Lander, in command of the Union forces at that point.

On the morning of the 5th, the troops were formed to resist the crossing of the enemy, who had already approached the town on the opposite side of the Potomac, and was demonstrating in force. After considerable shelling, at long range, by Jackson, which was replied to by Lander, the former withdrew, and pushed on to Romney, that being his real objective. As soon as this was discovered, Lander made a corresponding movement to Cumberland, where the main body of his division concentrated. Here the One Hundred and Tenth was assigned to Tyler's Brigade.

After remaining about three weeks, the regiment moved along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to its crossing of the South Branch of the Potomac, and was employed in guarding the bridge until the 6th of February, when it moved to the Paw Paw Tunnel.

On the 2d of March, General Lander died, and was succeeded in command by General James Shields.

On the 8th of March the regiment broke camp at Paw Paw, and proceeded by rail to Martinsburg, whence it marched to Winchester. On the 18th, the division moved on a reconnaissance towards Strasburg, involving brisk skirmishing with Ashby's Cavalry, the enemy retreating and burning the bridges as he went. The command bivouacked at Strasburg, on the night of the 19th, and on the 20th returned to camp, north of Winchester.

Early on the morning of the 23d, the enemy under Jackson approached in force, and attacked Shields' advanced brigade, near the little village of Kernstown, four and a half miles south of Winchester. Shields promptly ordered his forces forward, Tyler's Brigade being assigned to the duty of attacking and turning the enemy's left flank, which had been thrown forward to a commanding position, screened by timber and by a stone wall. The One Hundred and Tenth occupied the extreme right of the line, and in the charge upon the enemy in his sheltered position, suffered severely. Says General Shields, in his official report: "Our batteries on the opposite ridge, though admirably managed by their experienced chief, Lieutenant Colonel Daum, were soon found insufficient to check, or even retard the advance of such a formidable body. At this stage of the combat, a messenger arrived from Colonel Kimball, informing me of the state of the field, and requesting direction as to the employment of infantry. I saw there was not a moment to lose, and gave positive orders that all disposable infantry should be immediately thrown forward on our right to carry the enemy's batteries, and to assail and turn his left flank, and hurl it back on the centre. Colonel Kimball carried out these orders with promptitude and ability. He entrusted this movement to Tyler's splendid brigade, which, under its fearless leader, Colonel Tyler, marched forward with alacrity, and enthusiastic joy, to the performance of the most perilous duty of the day.

"The enemy's skirmishers were driven before it, and fell back upon the main body, strongly posted behind a high and solid stone wall, situated on an elevated ground. Here the struggle became desperate, and for a short time doubtful; but Tyler's brigade being soon joined on the left by portions of Sullivan's and Kimball's brigades, this united force dashed upon the enemy with a cheer and yell that rose high above the roar of battle, and though the rebels fought desperately, as their piles of dead attest, they were forced back through the woods by a fire as destructive as ever fell upon a retiring foe.

"Jackson, with his supposed invincible Stonewall Brigade, and the accompanying brigades, much to their mortification and discomfiture, were compelled to fall back in disorder upon their reserve. Here they took up a position for a final stand, and made an attempt, for a few minutes, to retrieve the fortunes of the day; but again, rained down upon them the same close and destructive fire. Again, cheer upon cheer rang in their ears. A few minutes only did they stand up against it, when they turned dismayed, and fled in disorder, leaving us in possession of the field, the killed and wounded, three hundred prisoners, two guns, four caissons, and a thousand stand of small arms. Night alone saved him from total destruction. "

The "loss in the regiment was thirteen killed, and thirty-nine wounded, out of three hundred engaged, the severe marching of the few preceding days having rendered many unfit to stand in the ranks. Lieutenant William Kochersperger was mortally wounded. The regiment was complimented, in a special order, for gallantry in this action..."
Moore's Rebellion Record, Vol. IV, page 323, Does.

On the morning succeeding the battle, the division advanced in pursuit of the retreating foe, as far as Harrisonburg. A few days later, the regiment was detached from the brigade, and for three weeks performed provost-guard duty at Winchester. At the end of that time it returned to Harrisonburg, and with the division moved for Fredericksburg, crossing the mountains into the Luray Valley, and thence across the Blue Ridge. In the passes of the Blue Ridge, Ashby's Cavalry hung upon the flanks of the column, greatly annoying it. On the 18th of May, in a brisk skirmish between the cavalry at Gaines' Cross Roads, company A was sent to the support of the Union forces, and succeeded in driving the enemy--losing two wounded. The balance of the regiment was immediately ordered up, and followed in pursuit for some distance, but failed to bring the enemy to bay.

Upon its arrival at Fredericksburg, the division was formed in four brigades, the One Hundred and Tenth being assigned to Colonel Carroll's Brigade, which became a part of McDowell's Corps.

Soon after arriving at Fredericksburg, McDowell's Corps was ordered back to the Shenandoah Valley, to the support of Banks and Fremont, in their encounters with Stonewall Jackson. On reaching the Luray Valley, Shields' Division was ordered down on the right bank of the river, to Port Republic, where the advance under Colonel Carroll met the advance of Jackson.

In the battle which ensued, the One Hundred and Tenth was posted on the left in a wood with the Fifth and Sixty-sixth Ohio thrown forward as skirmishers. Seeing the right hard pressed, General Tyler ordered the regiment to the threatened point; but before reaching it the enemy were driven, and it returned again to its former position. By this time the enemy had come up in heavy force on the left, and outflanking it, compelled it to fall back losing some guns and prisoners. Unable to stand up against the entire force of Jackson's Army, General Tyler ordered a retreat, and the division fell hastily back to Front Royal. The loss of the regiment was considerable in killed and wounded, and especially so in prisoners. With the brigade, the regiment retired to Cloud's Mills, near Alexandria, where it remained within the defenses of Washington, for several weeks.

ONE HUNDRED AND NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT.

THE Twentieth Pennsylvania Militia, which had been called out for the defense of the State, in 1862, under command of Colonel William B. Thomas, and again in 1863, was re-organized and recruited in July, 1864, for service in the National army, for a period of one hundred days, as the One Hundred and Ninety-second Regiment of the line. It was recruited in the city of Philadelphia, the troops rendezvousing at Camp Cadwalader, and consisted of fourteen companies, commanded by the following field officers: William B. Thomas, Colonel; Benjamin L. Taylor, Lieutenant Colonel; C. W. M'Clintock, and Henry J. Snyder, Majors. The regiment left Philadelphia on the 23d of July, and proceeded to Baltimore, encamping until the close of the month, about five miles from the city. On the 1st of August, it was ordered to garrison duty at Fort M'Henry. It was here drilled in heavy artillery duty, by a Lieutenant of the regular army. It had been previously well instructed in light infantry tactics by Colonel Thomas. Two weeks later it was relieved at the fort, and proceeded via Harrisburg and Pittsburg, to Johnson's Island, Lake Erie, where were confined large numbers of prisoners of war. It remained here but a few days, when its destination was again changed, and heading southward, it proceeded by rail to Gallipolis, a little town on the Ohio River, nearly opposite the mouth of the Great Kanawha River. Early in the war, the great advantages of this place for a depot of supplies for the Union armies, were recognized, and vast quantities had been accumulated there. To guard these, and ship and re-ship them as needed, was the duty to which the regiment was assigned. This was a responsible and arduous service. Raiding and guerrilla bands were constantly hovering in the neighborhood, and more than one bold plot was formed for the destruction of these supplies, which were of vital importance to the armies in West Virginia and in Tennessee. Detachments were regularly supplied for guard to boats plying upon the river, while others were frequently sent out to break up irregular bands of the enemy. On the 30th of September, companies M, A, B, F, D, L and G, under command of Major M'Clintock, proceeded to Weston, West Virginia, where they served under command of General Kelley, until the close of their term of enlistment. Lieutenant William E. Tyndale, in command of company K, while on his way with his command from Ironton, where he had for six weeks been on duty, to re-join the regiment, was drowned in the Ohio River, on the night of the 21st of October, by being accidentally precipitated from the transport on which he was moving. He was a good officer, and had served with credit at the front, in the earlier years of the war. On the 31st of October, the term of service of the regiment having already expired, the battalion remaining at Gallipolis was relieved, and returned by way of Parkersburg and Baltimore, to Philadelphia, whither the battalion at Weston had preceded it, and on the 11th of November, was mustered out of service. One company, under command of Captain William F. Johnston, re-enlisted for a further term of one year, and formed part of a second regiment, known as the One Hundred and Ninety-second. In the spring of 1865, nine new companies were recruited, which reported as fast as organized, to the commander of the Middle Military Division, with headquarters at Harper's Ferry, where a regimental organization was effected about the middle of March, with the following field officers: William W. Stewart, Colonel; Thomas M'Leester, Lieutenant Colonel; William F. Johnston, Major. When the spring campaign opened, the regiment moved up the valley to Staunton and Lexington; but few of the enemy were met, the fighting here being substantially at an end. It was, however, retained in the department, engaged in various duties, until the 24th of August, when it was mustered out of service.

214th Regiment

Pennsylvania Volunteers

This regiment, known as the Eighth Union League regiment, was recruited in the city of Philadelphia, and in the counties of Lancaster and Northampton, and was organized in March, 1865, with the following field officers:

- David B. M'Kibbin, Colonel;
- W. H. Harrison, Lieutenant Colonel;
- Washington M. Worrall, Major

Soon after its organization, it was ordered to the Shenandoah Valley, where, upon its arrival, it reported to General Egan, in command of the department, and was employed in guard and provost duty until July, when it was ordered to Washington, and was engaged in garrisoning the city. In November, Major Worrall, with a detachment, was ordered to duty at Annapolis, Maryland, where he was placed in command of the post. The regiment was finally mustered out of service at Washington, on the 21st of March, 1866.

PROOF OF DISABILITY.

NOTE.—This affidavit must be executed by a Commissioned Officer, if possible, but, if not possible to secure such evidence then two of the soldier's comrades should testify.

State of Pennsylvania, County of Philadelphia, SS:

ON THIS 16th day of Feb A. D. 1888; personally appeared before me a

D. Maggiate in and for the aforesaid County, duly authorized to administer oaths

Thomas C. M. aged 43 years, a resident of Philadelphia in the County of Philadelphia and State of Pennsylvania and

Jacob Snyder aged 43 years, a resident of Philadelphia in the county of Philadelphia and State of Pennsylvania, who being duly sworn according to law, state that they are acquainted with Captain John Snyder applicant for Invalid Pension, and know the said Captain Snyder to be the identical person of that name who enlisted or volunteered as a Captain in Company C 214th Regt

Regiment of Pennsylvania vols., and who was mustered but at Phil^{del} Washington on or about the 21st day of March, 1866

by reason of _____

[Here insert the reason of the soldier's discharge, if known; if not known, so state; or, if he died, so state.]

That the said Captain Snyder while in the line of his duty, at or near Winchester in the State of Virginia did, on or about the 15th day of July, 1866 become disabled in the following manner, viz:

[Here state the time and place and manner in which the wound or other injury was received. Describe the wound or injury, the part of the body wounded or injured, and all the circumstances attending it. If sickness, state time and place when contracted, what caused it, the name of the sickness, and how it affected him.]

That Captain John F. Snyder was sunstruck while marching from Winchester Va by Stevenson Station, and was incapacitated from doing duty for some time afterwards and always suffered from the effects while in the service of the United States.

That the facts stated are personally known to the affiant by reason of having been in the Company at the time of this occurrence.

[Here state whether affiant was with the command at the time the claimant contracted his disability, or whether his knowledge was otherwise obtained. All the facts known to affiant relative to the soldier's medical treatment for his disability while in the service should be stated, giving time and place, if possible.]

Origin of Sun Stroke

PHYSICIAN'S AFFIDAVIT.

TAKE NOTICE.—This affidavit should, if possible, be in the handwriting of the affiant; the marginal instructions should be carefully observed before writing out the statement. All the facts in possession of affiant as to the origin and continuance of the disability should be fully set forth, and the dates of treatment specifically given. If the affidavit is prepared from memoranda in possession of the physician, that fact should be stated.

and also in March 1885 - It was always my impression and belief that these attacks had been caused by his previous emetike while in the service

Condition of Soldier

NOTES.
The Physician's Affidavit should show the following facts:
1st. Whether or not he knew the soldier prior to enlistment; the length of time he has known him; how intimately, and what opportunities he has had of observing his physical condition, whether as his family physician or as a neighbor; and how near he has lived to him. If he knew that the soldier was a sound man at enlistment, he should so state, adding, if true, that had he been unsound he would have known it.
2d. If he treated claimant while in the service, either as his regimental surgeon or while claimant was home on furlough, that fact should be stated. The claimant's physical condition at such times should be clearly shown, as well as the nature of his disability, and dates of treatment.
3d. If he has treated soldier since discharge he should so state, giving the date of his first treatment; what his physical condition was at the time, with a complete diagnosis of the disability; the period during which he treated him should be stated, with dates, as near as possible, of the prescriptions.
4th. The extent to which claimant has been able to perform manual labor since discharge.
